

She was, however, unable to give any information about subject, but gave the name of Mr. Mulquin at 299 Plane Street and said he could be seen after 6 P.M. and who was well known in that neighborhood at the time our subject was there.

Operative then made further inquiries in the vicinity of 34 Campbell Street and finally located a Carl G. Lehman, the son of the present owner of the property and who acts as agent of the building for his mother, the present owner. He stated that his uncle owned the building at the time our subject was supposed to have occupied it. He was not able to give me any information about the place, but brought me to a Mr. Hugo Sipple, who conducts a hardware store at 39 Market St.

Mr. Sipple owned a house two doors away from 34 Campbell Street and lived there. He remembered the name of Janette Hilton, but was unable to recall anything about the house except that it was a disorderly resort. I showed him the picture, but he could not recognize the woman.

Mr. Lehman told Operative that he would make a search through his uncle's books and see if he can find the name of the person who rented the house or if the name of Janette Hilton appears. I told him I would get in touch with him in a few days. He lives at #51 Weequack Ave., Newark, N.J.

Operative then went to the vicinity of 119 Academy St. and made further inquiries about our subject at that address. Received information that a man named Jim Connorton was an old timer in this district and a former district leader. Located him in the City Hall of Newark. He is the Chief electrician of the City
